

HOW TO GET LEGAL HELP AT THE ASRC

If you are in Australia and fear harm on return to your country of birth, you may be able to receive free migration assistance from the Human Rights Law Program at ASRC.

HOW DO I GET LEGAL HELP?

- CALL US on (03) 9326 6066 to speak with Reception.
- VISIT US on-site at our Footscray office, Monday – Friday from 10am – 12.30pm.

Explain that you would like to speak with a lawyer. You may need to call back or visit again if our team is at capacity for the day.

If you are already receiving assistance from the HRLP, please wait for us to contact you.

WHAT DO I NEED TO PROVIDE?

- Your photo identification.
- Documents showing any deadline you have about your migration situation.
- Documents showing your current visa situation, so we can provide you with accurate advice. See our Document Pack for information on what these documents look like.

WHAT SHOULD I EXPECT?

- Our team will always be as clear as possible about what you can expect from us.
- There is a lot of demand for legal support, so it can take time to get the help you need. Please be patient and courteous with our team. We will always help you as soon we can, taking into account your deadlines.
- HRLP provides limited assistance, advice, information or representation. Depending on your circumstances, we might:
 - make a phone or in-person appointment for you to see a lawyer or paralegal;
 - provide you with information;
 - book you into a Clinic, including outside of business hours, or
 - refer you to another service.

WHERE CAN I GET MORE INFORMATION?

The HRLP publishes information on our website at asrc.org.au/get-help/legal-aid/.

Last updated: January 2023

The Human Rights Law Program is a service provided by ASRC ABN 64 114 965 815
Incorporation Number: A0042918